Rules of awarding degrees at undergraduate studies [first-cycle studies]
in Undergraduate Programme in Political Science (general academic profile)

General Provisions

1. The duration of diploma (B.A.) seminars at undergraduate studies is two semesters (2x30 hours)¹.
 2. Diploma seminars are preliminarily intended for the preparation of the degree (undergraduate) dissertation by the student.
 3. An important element of the seminar curriculum is the consolidation of knowledge and methodological skills acquired at the previous stages of studies and their practical application.
- I. Detailed rules of preparation and assessment of the degree dissertation

Rules and procedures for the selection of the thesis supervisor

1. The students choose the supervisor by subscribing to one of the diploma seminars offered in a given teaching cycle. The offer of diploma seminar together with their subject (research profile) is published at the website of the Faculty of Political Science and International Studies before the registration for the seminar begins.
2. Diploma seminars are connected with scientific research conducted at the Faculty of Political Science and International Studies.
3. Diploma seminars may be multi- or single-field ones, but each time must be connected to the scope of a given programme. Detailed offer of the seminar with respect to its subject matter may be found in the subject curriculum.
4. Persons conducting diploma (undergraduate) seminars hold at least the Ph.D. degree and are assigned in at least 25% to one of the disciplines, to which the given programme is assigned, or they have significant scientific achievements in one of those disciplines.
5. Maximum number of participants of the diploma (B.A.) seminar may not exceed 6 persons, in case of first-cycle studies conducted in English. In special circumstances, the head of the didactic unit may consent to a larger number of seminar participants.

6. Maximum number of degree (undergraduate and graduate) dissertations for a given academic year per one supervisor in all programmes administered by the Faculty of Political Science and International Studies may not exceed 16. This does not include the supervision over the participants of the M.A. seminar during first semester. In special instances, the head of the didactic unit may consent to a larger number of dissertations.
7. Provisions determining the maximum number of participants of diploma seminar participants and maximum number of degree dissertations per one supervisor are subject to gradual implementation and shall apply from 2021/22 academic year.
8. Minimum workload calculated for degree dissertation supervisor is 5 teaching hours per one seminar participant per semester. The curriculum committee recommends to the Dean of the Faculty of Political Science and International Studies and the Dean of the Faculty of Economic Sciences to include this workload in the teaching load of the employees supervising degree dissertations.
9. Individual diploma seminars are possible in case of readmission to the study programme in order to complete the degree dissertation (according to par. 13 section 5 of the Rules of Study), as well as in justified cases, upon consent granted to the student by the head of the didactic unit (or an authorised head of the studies). An application for individual diploma seminar (apart from the case readmission) should include substantive justification of the selection of the supervisor outside of the list of diploma seminar supervisors in a given academic year. The consent to individual diploma seminar is conditional upon the consent of the potential degree dissertation supervisor.
10. In justified cases it is possible to change the supervisor upon consent of the head of the didactic unit (or an authorised head of the studies), upon consent of the current and future thesis supervisor.

Rules and procedures for the selection of the degree dissertation topic

1. The topic of the degree dissertation is determined jointly by the seminar participant and the supervisor, taking into account the interests of the seminar participant, the profile of the research activity of the supervisor and the subject of the diploma seminar (if applicable).
2. The topic of the degree dissertation shall be well matched to the research areas relevant for the studies curriculum and the discipline/s attributed to the studies programme.
3. The topic of the degree dissertation should determine the research task that was executed in the degree dissertation (refers to programmes with general academic profile).

Rules and procedures for approving degree dissertation topics

1. The supervisors submit the determined dissertation topics do the section of planning and teaching organization at the Faculty of Political Science and International Studies together with brief (max. 1500 characters) information prepared by the student concerning the assumptions of work:
 - not later than until 15 December of a given academic year in case of first-cycle studies;
 - in case of change of the topic – immediately upon determination of the changed topic.
2. Section of planning and teaching organization at the Faculty of Political Science and International Studies prepares the list of submitted degree dissertation topics and submits it to the Curriculum Committee for approval.
3. Curriculum Committee appoints permanent teams for approving degree dissertation topics for respective studies programmes. The team is led by the chairman.
4. Representatives of the Departments of the Faculty of Political Science and International Studies may be members of the teams for approving degree dissertation topics.

5. The team appointed by the Curriculum Committee performs initial verification of the topics for their compliance with the studies programme, profile and the disciplines, to which the programme was assigned.
